MASS MEETING AT HOME WAREHOUSE

Will Discuss School Bonds—Children Parade—Colored Committee At Work

The $80,000 school bond election will be discussed at a big mass meeting at the Home Warehouse tonight.

Arrangements to this effect were made following the parade of the school children this morning and it was decided to postpone for the present the meeting which was to have been held at the Second Christian church tonight. Due notice will be given later of a meeting there.

There will be a number of speakers on hand and the entire question of the building and location will be gone over.

The school children's parade in favor of the bonds was an attractive and interesting feature Friday morning. Few realized that there were so many little children attending the public school in Richmond. The parade was headed by the Leeds brass band, which made some fine music on its first public appearance. The youngsters carried banners urging the people to vote for their interests, to give them grass to play on and not cinders and other such notices showing their preference for the Madison Hill site for the great new school which is proposed to be erected in Richmond if the bonds carry.

The colored citizens who realize the needs of the community have organized a campaign committee to work for the bonds, and several of their leaders are predicting a great majority of the colored vote in their favor. Rev. Green B. Miller, chairman of the committee, handed the Daily Register the following about their meeting, committee and plans, which will be read with interest by the white voters. It was as follows:

A mass meeting was held at Methodist church (colored) last Tuesday night, June 7. Rev. Green B. Miller was called to the chair. The object of the meeting was stated by the chairman. The principal speakers on the occasion were Mr. John Noland, chairman of the Board of Education, Dr. Telford, Miss Belle Bennett, Mr. C. C. Wallace and others. The question was earnestly discussed pro and con, by which much light was turned on the principles of the school bond issue. Since which time a campaign committee was appointed to canvass the city, especially among the colored voters, for the support of said bonds, to erect and improve the school buildings in the city of Richmond.

The campaign committee has called another meeting to be held at the St. Paul A. M. E. Church Monday night, June 20th, at 7:30 for the benefit of the school bond issue. All concerned are invited to be present.

The following persons have been requested to address the voters on the occasion, Mr. James A. White, Mrs. Maggie B. Wilson, Mr. E. M. Embury and others.

BARDSTOWN BOOZE NABBED IN DANVILLE

(By Associated Press)

Danville, Ky., June 10.—A sensation was created here Wednesday night when Ogden Stiles, member of a wealthy Bardstown family, was arrested charged with transporting and having liquor in his possession.

Appearing before U. S. Commissioner W. S. Lawwill this morning, Stiles' bond was fixed at $10,000, which he gave for his appearance before the commissioner at 10 o'clock a. m., Friday.

Noticing an Essex car being driven through the streets last night at a speed not just to his liking, Deputy Sheriff Sam Fox followed the driver, who halted near the Centre College campus. When the deputy approached it was noticed that several young men hurriedly left the car. Upon examination nine quarts of red whisky were found hidden in a coffee sack in the car, one bottle had been broken and it was the smell of the liquor that caused officers to make the search of the car.

The car as well as the whisky was seized and Stiles lodged in jail for the night.

FINE TRIBUTE TO VIRGIL HYLAND

His mother, Mrs. Marcus Hyland, of Estill avenue, has received an appreciated letter from Lt. John B. Murphy, battery commander of Private Virgil Hyland, who was killed at Camp Knox in an accident last week. Full details are given of the accident and the officer testifies to the high standing and esteem in which the young soldier was held, making the statement that he was the best soldier in the battery. The letter will be read with much interest by his many friends here at home. It says:

Battery B, 81st F. A., Camp Knox, Ky., June 3, 1921.

My Dear Mrs. Hyland:

Your son, Private Virgil Hyland, Saddler, Battery B, 81st Field Artillery, died this morning as a result of injuries received while his regiment was on maneuvers May 31st, to June 3, 1921.

At 10:30 on the morning of June 2, the first battalion left its firing position to move back several miles to a small town called West Point. The country was very rough and hilly. About 11:45 a. m. after the battery had marched several miles we came to a sharp turn in the road with a large tree on the inside of the turn. This made the turn very difficult as there were four pairs of horses in tandem on this particular carriage. Hyland was riding on the battery wagon, a large wagon containing store spare parts for the guns, and soldiers' equipment. This wagon was marching at the rear of the column. I was at the head of the column. I noticed after the battery had straightened out that his carriage was not following. I halted the battery and took the ammuni- cations back to find that the battery wagon had turned over and hurt Hyland to what extent I did not know. He was loaded in the ambulance and rushed to camp. He arrived at camp at 3 p. m. Apparently he did not suffer much for he did not complain. The entire battery and myself offer our sincerest condolences. Hyland had not an enemy in the battery and from all I have seen he was loved by everyone.

I have been his battery commander for nearly a year, and it is my opinion that he was the best soldier in the battery. The battery will suffer a great loss because of this fine young soldier's death. Again I send you my deepest sympathy to you and the rest of his family.

The remains will be shipped at 8 o'clock in the morning. His brother and a sergeant will accompany the body.

Very sincerely,
JOHN B. MURPHY,
Lt. Col. 81st F. A., Commanding Battery B.
